

Joseph Hooker Takes A Hook Of A Job!

A famous and dedicated botanist has recently accepted the botanical job as Director at Kew Gardens, Richmond.

On Thursday 2nd March 1832 scientist, Sir Joseph Hooker, accepted to be director of Kew Gardens.

He was honoured to be head of Kew and developed lots of plants since.

Before he accepted the position, he was a surgeon in the Navy.

He published a book in 1829 (which was well read).

We wish Joseph the best of luck!
