

Kew Garden Hits Jackpot.

Kew Garden has appointed one of the ^{world's} most prestigious botanist.

Kew Garden has appointed Joseph ^{Hooker} - who was born-and-bred in Halseworth - to be their Director. ~~of~~ Having followed in his father's footsteps of being Director of Kew Gardens - a ~~so~~ grand botanical garden - he will be able to expand his search for plants; he has already founded seven thousand new species of Rhododendron plants and twenty-nine new species of Rhododendron.

Altho Although Joseph Hooker took his father's lectures, he was a surgeon in the navy. Joseph Hooker has already traveled to lots of countries: India, where he got arrested; New Zealand, where he was looking for colonial flora; Rocky mountains, where he was looking for American flora. While being a surgeon in the ^{navy} navy, he went on lots of expeditions, once he got arrested in India: ~~Because~~ Joseph Hooker strayed too far across the Himalayas, he was imprisoned by the Rajah who was an arrogant man. Although being imprisoned, it didn't put him off going on other expeditions. Joseph Hooker - who followed in his father's footsteps - is looking forward to oversee the construction of the first plant laboratory.

Joseph Hooker ^{quoted} ~~quoted~~, "I am very excited and honoured to be working for such a world class leading aboricultural establishment. I am also look in forward to travel the world extensively to search ~~for more~~ out new species of plants and secure their future."

Joseph Hooker's father quoted, "this is excellent news even though he replied me."

If you could find time to go to Kew Gardens and possibly meet Joseph Hooker, please do.
